

Chamber seeking small business nominees

Small Business Week is coming up October 24 to 30, and Elk Point Chamber of Commerce is again sponsoring their Small Business Person of the Year award.

Do you know a business person in this community who goes out of their way to provide excellent service and satisfy their customers' needs? If so, please help the Chamber to recognize their contribution to the community by nominating them for the 1993 award. Please send your nomination, stating reasons you think this person or persons worthy of recognition, to the Chamber at Box 639, Elk Point. You must sign your letter and include your telephone number in case further details are required. Deadline for nominations is Friday, October 29. The winner will be announced at the November 3 meeting of the Chamber.

Forum Friday

The Chamber has several other events in the works. The Federal Candidates' Forum goes this Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Seniors' Recreation Centre, with five minute opening speeches from each candidate followed by a one hour question-and-answer session, and three minute closing speeches. Coffee and doughnuts will be served. Everyone is welcome to come out and ask the candidates for the answers you want to know.

CTAP Review

A full day workshop to review Elk Point's Community Tourism Action Plan will take place Saturday, October 30 in Town Council Chambers, beginning at 9 a.m. Organizations are invited to send representation to this workshop, and interested individuals are also invited to attend.

The Mayor's Prayer Breakfast is coming up Saturday, November 6, with a breakfast smorgasbord at 8:30 a.m. and program beginning at 9:15 a.m., in the Empress Banquet Room. Guest speaker will be Merrill Clark. Further details regarding the program will be announced at the next Chamber meeting.

The Reverse Trade Show, which evolved from the economic development workshop, has been set for Tuesday, December 7 from 3 to 7 p.m. in the Seniors' Recreation Centre. This event will give industry a chance to meet with local suppliers and find out what needs can be filled right here in our community.

The Chamber welcomed several newcomers, including Kolette Taber, the new director of the Northern Lights Library System, and her husband Andrew Ross, who plans to establish a landscaping business in Elk Point. New St.

Paul - Smoky Lake Community Futures Director Lana Foster was also on hand.

The Chamber has sent an intervention to the Public Utilities Board stating the Chamber's concerns with the price increase proposed by Elk Point Gas Co., focusing on the potential hardship to businesses and residents if the increase is implemented. The hearing is October 14, and Gord Henry will be attending on behalf of the Chamber.

Terri Ehler reported that a smaller format community calendar had been discussed at the Interagency meeting the HEINSBURG HIGH'S HIGHEST ACHIEVERS - for the 1992-93 school year were Lily Thomson, right, accepting her trophy from Awards Night coordinator Sandra Bishop, and David Skolarchuk. These two students achieved marks of 80 percent or higher in every subject. See Page 12 for full details of Heinsburg Awards Night.

Students probe election issues

High school students from Ashmont, Mallaig, Heinsburg and St. Paul Regional High School visited Elk Point's F. G. Miller High last Tuesday to hear the views of four Beaver River federal election candidates. Eugene Houle of the New Democratic Party, Michael Zacharko of the Liberals and the Reform Party's Deborah Grey, along with Beaver River Progressive Conservative Association President Monte Bauer, standing in for candidate Dave Broda, explained their parties' platforms and fielded questions from the students.

Moderator was Laverne Wilson.

The deficit was a prime target for the question period, with the candidates asked how they plan to eliminate the $35 billion shortfall. Grey's solution was to reform government structures, reduce tax subsidies and concessions and to revise the transfer payments to the provinces. Bauer feels party leader Kim Campbell would stick behind her last budget, which had numerous cuts. Houle feels the national debt is "darned scary for the poor, the unemployed and the lower middle class to have to carry while the multinational companies haul money out of the country, leaving us to hold the bag."

How to eliminate a debt which has been growing for two decades within 3 to 5 years, was another concern. Bauer said Campbell is committed to a 5 year plan and is looking at cuts and restructuring to meet that goal. Grey said the PCs' 5-year plan "has been in the works for 9 years," but that the Reform Party "will attack the debt ferociously." Zacharko feels both PC and Reform "would achieve the feat of walking on water" if they should meet their 5 and 3 year goals. Looking at running a country as you would a business will not work, Zacharko said, because "how do you shut down a country? That's insane!" Houle agreed that a country cannot be run like a business, and said he found that out when Saddle Lake had a deficit. "Business economics didn't work - it hurt people. What we need is better management of resources."

What was the point of bringing in the GST, one student queried. Houle felt the tax had not helped the deficit, but had created a black market in bartering. Grey, who voted against the GST, said the tax had not brought in as much as the previous manufacturers' sales tax, and had not been put toward the deficit, as had originally been intended. Bauer feels the tax was "too complicated" and needs revision, and that his candidate, Dave Broda, "would like to sit down with small businesses and help them simplify it." Zacharko called it "the guts and suffering tax" and said it was misdirected. However, he added, "when the Liberals take office, it will be reworked."

Cutting out the Senate was suggested as one money previous day. The Chamber agreed to work with the Interagency to investigate this possibility further.

Ms Elhert was also pleased to announce that the Elk Point and District Agricultural Society plans to commemorate 1994 - International Year of the Family, by putting the logo for that event on their ice this year.

Vern King reported on a

Heritage Regions Program meeting he attended recently in LacLaBiche. A similar introductory meeting will be held in St. Paul October 21, after which there will be an organizational meeting in Lac La Biche November 18 to set up a heritage region for northeast Alberta. He encouraged a broad representation to attend the latter, as he feels this would be very beneficial for our area.

Cuts on PTA agenda

The possibility of education funding cuts of 20 to 30 percent will be discussed at the Wednesday, October 20 meeting of the F. G. Miller High School Parent Teacher Association. Education funding roundtable discussions are in the works, and information will be given on these at the meeting, as well as any updates on the situation.

The first segment of the meeting will offer an opportunity to hear guest speaker Merrill Clark's ideas on "Strengthening School and Family Through Community and Supportive Relationships." This should be a very interesting and informative meeting, so please attend.

BLENDED FAMILIES / SINGLE PARENTING

Strategies for dealing with the breakdown of a relationship, transition time and entering subsequent relationships will be discussed. Facilitators will also focus on stress and coping skills involved in single parent and blended family situations.

MANAGING STRESS

Four ways to cope with stress.

People who manage stress well have learned how to deal with difficult situations, anxiety and ongoing pressures. Here are some suggestions from ParticipACTION about how you can take action against stress:

Support from family and friends.

Sharing your feelings and

Wellness for women

problems with family members and friends is often the best way to cope with stress. Other support systems, such as self-help groups, employee assistance programs or professional counselling can also help.

Look after yourself.

People who feel good about themselves and have some sense of control over their lives tend to deal with stress well. They look and feel healthy because they take care of themselves. Decide to treat yourself well: stay active, eat well, take time to relax, rest and enjoy some good times with friends and family. Tell yourself you are okay.

Laugh!

People who cope well use humor to relax, to release tension and anger, and to find the positive in a stressful situation. Seek out people who make you laugh; rent a funny movie; send a humorous memo.

Positive thinking.

Positive thinking is the key to approaching life - and stress - as a challenge to be enjoyed. Positive thinking is giving yourself the go-ahead to succeed. Plan how you will handle a potentially stressful situation before it occurs. Then, use positive 'self-talk' to assure yourself that you can deal with the situation. People who cope effectively look back on stressful events and say, "I learned from the experience; I'm better because of it."

TIDBITS

If you are anticipating the worst while hoping for the best, you will get the worst. The things that happen to you are in direct accordance with the things in which you put your faith. Believe you are licked - and you are.

- Harold Shermar

You must look into people, as well as at them.

A NEWSPAPER WEEK SALUTE - Many hands work on getting each issue of the Review into your homes. This week, we salute Claudette Lefebvre (above), who is shown stamping address labels onto a stack of St. Paul Journals. In addition, Claudette also typesets ads and stories for both the Journal and Review. Below is Elk Point Postmaster Bill Currey, who, with his crew, sees that the papers get into your mailbox, no matter how late we get them to the post office. Thanks for all your efforts!

Our Past

By Steve Andrishak

The weekly newspaper has always been a popular publication in every district, as far back as the early 1900s when settlers started arriving. These weeklies provided us with many interesting local news items not found in larger publications. With their advertising system they have provided the public with a way of disposing of their goods or purchasing of additional ones. The surrounding weekly papers have all served our district well.

The oldest weekly in our immediate district was one started by William Blaisdell Cameron, the lone white survivor of the Frog Lake Massacre. It was known as the Vermilion Signal and was founded in 1906. It suspended operations a year or two later. In 1909 the Vermilion Standard was founded by Sextus R. P. Cooper who arrived in the Vermilion district in 1907 from Baldur, Manitoba where he published another weekly newspaper. Mr. Sextus R. P. Cooper operated the Vermilion Standard until 1953 then turned it over to his four sons, Ashley, Vernon, Doug and Percy. This weekly paper has operated continuously for 85 years but is no longer owned by the Coopers.

The first known weekly paper published in nearby St. Paul was called the St. Paul Star. It began operating about 1922 but lasted only for about two years before it folded. It was published by the Star Publishing Company of St. Paul, Alberta. Its yearly subscription rate was $1.

The St. Paul Journal was founded in 1924 by Gilbert H. LaRue. In later years it was operated by his son George. During the second World War it was taken over by a Mr. Thivierge who ran it for about two years before it was turned back to George LaRue. It changed hands again on December 2, 1949 when it sold to Lucien Drouin. Lucien published this paper for about 35 years before retiring about ten years ago. It is still owned and operated by the Drouin family.

The weekly newspapers

Over the years, Elk Point has had many weekly newspapers, most of them printed elsewhere. In 1926 an entire page of the St. Paul Journal was devoted to the Elk Point district and was known as the Elk Point Journal.

Next came the Elk Point Hunter (about 1962.) This weekly was published in Edmonton, Alberta by T. W. Pue - the local editor was Mrs. Niki Riemer.

The Elk Point Star made its debut in the early 1970s. It, too, was published by T. W. Pue and printed in Edmonton. The local reporter was Marlene Nettleton. The Elk Point Star was followed by the Elk Point Reflections, which began operating in 1979. Its publishers were Heather Calder and Ethel Schreyer of Mannville, Alberta. This weekly operated only a short while.

The Elk Point Sentinel started up in 1980. It was published every Wednesday by Erik Nielsen in the back part of the old Co-op building across from the Post Office.

Ten years ago, in September, 1983, the Elk Point Lakeland Review started up in those same premises. It was published by Kathy Howard, who also published Mannville Reflections at that time, and the editor was Fija Schwab. John McGregor sold advertising and Donna Boothman was also on staff. In March 1984, the Review was bought out by the St. Paul Journal, and published by Darrell and L. H. Drouin of St. Paul. Vicki Brooker became managing editor in September of that year. Today, this weekly publication is known as the Elk Point Review and is still edited by Mrs. Brooker.

Over the years, there have been many interesting news happenings printed in the above mentioned weekly papers. The Vermilion Standard in its April 10, 1918 issue describes Vermilion's biggest fire which occurred a few days earlier. In all, 28 stores and business blocks, involving 38 business firms, were destroyed.

Another weekly paper printed in 1954 warns the public not to forget to put 5 cents postage on all mail addressed outside of your town or district. This rate change went into effect on April 1, 1954.

The St. Paul Journal of August 19, 1981 mentions that a temporary ferry service was being installed at the Elk Point bridge to carry traffic across the North Saskatchewan River. The bridge was damaged on July 30 when a semi trailer tanker carrying 7000 gallons of crude oil went out of control approaching the bridge, skidded onto the bridge and burned for 15 and a half hours. Complete repair work on this bridge would take about four months.

In February, 1984 the Vermilion Standard reported that the federal and provincial energy ministers had announced that a $50 million oil and sands recovery project would take place in the Elk Point district. A prospect of development was in the air as by 1990, the town of Elk Point was expected to reach a population of 5000 on account of the project (Someone must have been dreaming.)

Another item of interest appeared in a 1952 St. Paul Journal. It reported that "a fire of undetermined origin swept upon 20 acres of standing oats on the farm of Fred Andrishak last Thursday afternoon and destroyed it completely. Fred was to start combining it the following day."

It is true that our weekly newspapers keep us informed of various happenings in our district and provide us with much interesting reading material, whenever news happens.

Getting out alive

Educating workers to do their work safely is the goal of the Elk Point - based CanSafe, Inc.

This week's Confined Space Entry - Rescue course is one of the numerous and varied aspects of safety training this firm offers, ranging from first aid and CPR to vehicle extrication to chain saw safety. Many courses, such as the one this week, are geared toward the oil industry.

Vic Vogel of Safety Vic Inc., Weyburn, Saskatchewan, provided the training unit and specialized equipment required for this course. The unit is a large tank-shaped vessel mounted on a trailer, the inside of which is a maze of tunnels and compartments. A peek into the rear access shows a low passageway about two feet wide, which takes an abrupt turn only a short distance into the unit. Other points of entry, on top and on the front of the unit, give access to similarly tight quarters. CanSafe provided the instructors for the course, Ken Morrow and his assistant Mike Weir.

Wednesday afternoon's activities focused on extricating a 'victim,' apparently overcome by toxic fumes, from the depths of the unit. As a sentinel peering into one of the top, manhole-shaped openings, reported "MAN DOWN!" a rescue crew sprang into action, grabbing rescue equipment and hurrying up the steep stairway. Workers were lowered into the manhole and quickly lifted the victim up through the opening. He was then strapped securely into a flexible plastic stretcher resembling an oversized crazy carpet, and lowered with the use of ropes down the almost vertical ladder. Elk Point Ambulance crew was waiting in a 'safe zone' clear of the unit to take charge of the victim and render first aid.

With the first victim loaded into the ambulance for transport, a second was discovered in the front portion. This rescue involved crawling into the small tunnel and dragging the victim out the hole to safety. This rescue involved the use of a basket stretcher, down a less steep stairway. Again, the ambulance crew was standing ready to offer their aid.

CanSafe's Tony Wentworth said the course is necessary for workers because of the government regulations regarding procedures which must be followed when entering into a confined area situation. Pre-entry procedures must be followed, and the workers must know what to do if something goes wrong.

Vogel joined the trainers in congratulating the rescue crews on their efforts, and said he was enjoying his first visit to Elk Point, where he has found the people friendly and hospitable.

Share your ideas about improving our health system

Albertans know first hand what works, and what could be better, in Alberta's health system.

Alberta spends almost $4 billion a year on health services - about 30 per cent of all government spending. It is important that we look for savings now to ensure that our health system is one Albertans will always be able to afford.

Our health system is changing - we have just implemented $122 million in reductions in health spending.

Your ideas count

The commitment to provide all Albertans with quality health services will always be the government's bottom line.

If you need information about the recent changes announced for the health system, or if you would like to tell us what works, and what we could do better, please call our toll-free health information line.

GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA

saver. Bauer agreed, and said "Dave believes it's outdated, and doesn't reflect the concerns of the people." However, for any western politicians to abolish it would be a rash move, Grey remarked, "we would be toast." Zacharko felt the Senate should be elected and have its job descriptions reconsidered. Houle cautioned that the Senate is "the last opportunity to stop a runaway government. They are the sounding board of the country... and should represent us well."

Health care and secondary education also were also concerns. Some form of health care program was found necessary by all candidates, but waste and abuse of the system were seen as expensive problems. A question regarding layoffs of nurses brought more concerns to the fore, with Grey suggesting cuts could more realistically be made in middle management, Bauer suggesting user fees and Zacharko suggesting less frills for medical facilities. Houle is from a culture which found natural acetylic acid in willow bark, rather than going to the drug store for aspirins, and feels there are many ways to cut spending.

Finding jobs after completing one's secondary education is naturally of concern to students. Zacharko feels the provinces must work together with the federal government to initiate training programs, while Houle feels education is critical to getting out of debt. Grey feels business will take risks at expanding, once the government gets the debt under control, and that post secondary funding must be kept available. Bauer said Campbell has outlined an extensive program of education and retraining, which includes increased student loans, tax credits and youth business initiatives.

Pulling Canada out of the recession and eliminating employment is a big job. Bauer feels this can be done by education, increased trade opportunities, restructuring of research and development. Grey, on the other hand, said that if taxes and spending are brought under control, "businesses will do the rest." Zacharko suggested a partnership between employees and employer as a possibility for job creation, while Houle suggested matching available resources to the people who could make use of them.

Job creation on a more local level was also brought forward. Zacharko said a MP must provide leadership in this, and feels there is a great opportunity in this riding, for establishment of a meat processing facility to replace Gainers. Houle felt "that's the kind of thinking we have to do, but you have to empower our communities to make those decisions, with the leadership of their mayors, councils and chiefs." Grey agreed this was an excellent idea, but to get all kinds of new businesses, the tax levels must go down. Bauer said the PCs not only have a job creation plan but have gone after export opportunities abroad, but "Ms Grey voted against the North American Free Trade Agreement and shut the door on opportunities."

This statement was reiterated by Bauer in response to the next question on what each candidate would do for agriculture. "She voted against $900 million for agriculture, against GRIP and NISA...Preston wants to eliminate agriculture." Grey, on the other hand, said Reform has met with agricultural communities across the nation and has found trade distortion because of subsidies given to US and European farmers, as well as political appointments to marketing boards. Zacharko remarked on the "insane trade war between the US and the European Common Market," and said Canadian agriculture can survive only because of the grain commission. Houle feels the rural way of life is well worth protecting, and says that Canadian products are known for their superior quality to the extent that a slice of Canadian bacon sells for $2 in California restaurants.

Deborah Grey took advantage of her closing statement to answer Bauer. "Yes, I did vote against NAFTA, because it had no commitment to the environment... and the water question was not addressed." As for the $900 million, it was part of a $1.562 billion appropriation bill, "and was just thrown in to make it look good." Grey said she will demand on her constituents' behalf "less government intervention in your lives, a triple E senate and parliamentary reform."

Mike Zacharko feels that "brilliant solutions have been proposed but the present government hasn't learned from experience. During the Charlottetown Accord, Canadians said 'how dare you tell us what's good for us?' You decide. Your vote is your greatest treasure."

Monte Bauer attacked Grey again in his closing statement, saying both her track record and that of her party are "far from perfect." As an alternative he offered a "team who will eliminate the deficit, help agriculture and health care...with a leader who is new, smart and sensitive. Do you want to be represented in the government or in the opposition?" This statement was greeted with the lone chorus of 'boos' in the forum.

Eugene Houle thanked Grey for her representation, and said she had done well at defending social policies and voting against NAFTA. However, he dismissed Reform Party leader Preston Manning as "a slick snake-oil salesman... who makes the Reform Party scary."

"Canada Post is not going to solve its fiscal problems by closing rural post offices or by changing rural postal service."

-The Standing Committee on Government Operations, 1987

Despite this conclusion, in the past six years, over 1500 rural post offices have been closed - taking important, professional jobs away from many rural Canadian communities. Communities across Canada. Communities in your riding!

All with no improvement in service.

Don't close our rural Post Offices.

This is not nostalgia. It's better service.

We manage rural Post Offices - the backbone of Postal Service in this country.

This is Community Newspapers Week, and we have a very special display in our showcase, thanks to Steve Andrishak of the Fort George Museum. An Edmonton paper printed the day Alberta became a province, a 1927 St. Paul Journal and an even earlier St. Paul Star are among these interesting issues. Make sure to drop in and take a look.
